Whether you're a vegetarian, vegan, gluten-free, dairy-free, or simply health-conscious, this guide will lead you to the hidden gems of Bangkok's culinary scene. Discover local favorites, vibrant street food stalls, and sophisticated restaurants that prioritize your well-being.

Vegetarian and Vegan Delights

May Veggie Home

Nestled in the heart of Bangkok's bustling Sukhumvit district, May Veggie Home is a haven for vegetarians and vegans alike. The restaurant offers an extensive menu of traditional Thai dishes, recreated with plant-based ingredients. Don't miss their signature green curry and sweet potato noodles.

Veggiezzo

For a more casual dining experience, head to Veggiezzo, a street food stall located in the Tha Prachan campus. The stall specializes in plant-based versions of popular Thai dishes, including pad thai, khanom jeen (rice noodles with curry), and larb (spicy minced meat salad).

Gluten-Free and Dairy-Free Options

The Gluten-Free Pantry Co.

The Gluten-Free Pantry Co. is a sanctuary for those with gluten intolerance or celiac disease. The café offers a wide range of gluten-free bread, pastries, sandwiches, and breakfast items. Their gluten-free pancakes and homemade granola are must-try dishes.

Kokotel Bangkok Sukhumvit 11

For a dairy-free dining experience, consider Kokotel Bangkok Sukhumvit 11. The hotel's restaurant offers a variety of dishes that cater to dairy-free and vegan guests. Their dairy-free smoothies, pizzas, and pasta dishes are highly recommended.

Healthy Street Food

Fruit Stands

For a quick and refreshing snack, explore the city's many fruit stands.

Bangkok's tropical climate allows for a variety of fresh fruits to be available year-round. Try a freshly cut papaya, mango, or pineapple as a healthy and revitalizing treat.

Som Tum and Grilled Corn

Som tum, a spicy papaya salad, is a popular Thai street food that can be customized to your dietary needs. Request for less sugar and chili if you prefer a healthier version. Grilled corn, brushed with a savory sauce, is another street food option that is both tasty and nutritious.
