Lake Haldeman, a 152-acre reservoir, is a popular destination for bass fishing. Fishermen can also try their luck at Ramey Lake, known for its abundant catfish and crappie. For a unique and challenging experience, float fishing along the Little Sandy River or Tygarts Creek offers the chance to encounter a variety of fish species in a pristine natural setting.

Floating Paradise

In addition to its world-class fishing, Greenup County is also a paddler's paradise. The Little Sandy River, a designated Kentucky Wild River, winds through the county's rugged terrain, offering a scenic and exhilarating float trip for kayakers, canoeists, and tubers. The river features clear waters, whitewater rapids, and secluded coves, providing a memorable experience for outdoor enthusiasts of all skill levels.

Tygarts Creek, a tributary of the Little Sandy River, is another popular floating destination. Its slower currents and narrower channels make it an ideal choice for beginners and families. Along the creek, paddlers can enjoy breathtaking views of towering cliffs, lush forests, and abundant wildlife.
